

PSAT RESULTS

Congratulations on taking the 2009 PSAT. This is your first step in preparing yourself for taking the SAT. How well you perform on the SAT will have a major impact on college admissions.

Your Score:

To predict what you might make on the SAT, add a zero to your Critical Reading and Math score.

For example: Critical Reading Score: 49	SAT equivalent: 490
Math Score: 50	SAT equivalent: 500
	Total SAT: 990

1600 is a perfect score.

You can also add in your Writing Skills score:

For example: Writing Score: 41	SAT equivalent: 410
	Total SAT: 990 + 410 = 1400

If you add the Writing a 2400 is a perfect score

Review Your Answers:

This section lists what you got right and what you got wrong. You should use this as a study guide for preparing for the SAT. It's like getting a test back from your teacher with all the correct answers to study for a BIG exam.

Improving your Scores:

This section gives an improvement plan just of you. You can get additional information about SAT study plans, college information, PSAT question reviews, etc...by going to www.MyRoad.com or www.collegeboard.com/quickstart and using YOUR CODE that is listed on the bottom right hand corner of the score report.

PSAT/NMSQT: (far right hand column)

The "Selection Index" and "Percentile" compares how you did on the PSAT with other students in your same grade level across the nation. If you are an 11th grader these scores can determine if you pre-qualify for National Merit Scholarship or other scholarships given by College Board. Juniors are usually notified in the summer/fall if any of their scores pre-qualify them for National Merit or other scholarships.

Your Education Plan:

This section was generated based on what you indicated you were interested in for a college major. Review the information as well as suggested high school courses you should take.
